THE BEAUTIFUL THINGS.

Life's beautiful things are so many,
So free to the humblest one,
That even to count them for thought's delight,
Ah, surely, we'd never be done!
But only because of their plenty,
Because they are ours when we will,
We value them light as common and cheap,
And our souls are unsatisfied still!

Reaching out for the things of our dreaming
With vision so stubborn and blind
That the rapture which calls to us day by day
Is too near for our seeking to find;
Oh, the loss of it all, and the pity,
And the yearning and hunger and pain,
That we live in a world full of beautiful things,
The beauty of which we disdain!

WHEN PARIS WENT MAD.

By M. QUAD.

COPYRIGHT, 1901, BY C. B. LEWIS.

I had been with one of the French armies as war correspondent, and with it, or such fragments of it as escaped annihilation or capture, I returned to Paris. There was a spirit of dissatisfaction, disgust and mutiny among the rank and file, and we reached Paris to find even a stronger spirit existing among all classes of citizens. It was the seed that was to grow the commune. To this day the French soldier who took part in the war that was expected to humble Berlin cannot understand that he was outnumbered, outgeneraled and outfought and that France rushed to arms without being half prepared. The defeated soldier will simply have it that he was sold out by his general. That was all the talk in Paris as we fell back—German gold had bought victories—and the thirst for vengeance upon the alleged traitors was intense.

I had had enough of soldier work, and I settled down to become a stationary correspondent, although it was only a few days ere nothing could be sent out of the besieged city except by way of balloons. As soon as I had found lodgings I secured a military pass and accompanying it a certificate from Minister Washburn as to my nativity and neutrality. These stood me in good stead within the next week. There were no doubt many German spies in Paris, but the people greatly exaggerated the number and were ready to denounce any one not a born Frenchman. I had been taking my meals at a certain miserable restaurant and paying the prices asked without complaint when one evening the keeper of the place, who was a surly old fellow at best, attempted an extortion that I resented. We had some hot words, and I left in anger, and not more than an hour had passed when I received a visit from a trio of the national guard. I had been denounced by the old man as a German spy. The trio consisted of a corporal and two men, and when they had gained my room the corporal saluted me and courteously observed:

HE WAS STILL SHOUTING WHEN A VOLLEY LAID HIM LOW.

"Sorry to trouble monsieur just as he is preparing for bed, but the fact is I am ordered to take him out and shoot him."

"For what?" I asked.

"For being a spy in the employ of Bismarck. Come, monsieur. We have others to shoot and cannot waste time."

"But you go a little fast, corporal," protested one of the men as I looked from one to the other and wondered if it was a joke. "I think the orders were to take monsieur before the provost marshal for investigation."

"Say you so, Francois? Well, what's the odds to him whether he is shot tonight or tomorrow? It will come to shooting anyhow, and we have three other places to visit before we can go back. Be reasonable, monsieur."

For answer I showed him my passes, named the headquarters to which I had been attached and then related the cause of my dispute with the owner of the restaurant.

"Ah, I see," replied the corporal as he scratched his head and smiled. "It was the old man's little way of settling a 3 franc dispute, and he is probably making merry over it. Monsieur American, you are all K. O., as I believe they say in your country, and it will give me pleasure to do a little business with monsieur of the cafe. Attention, squad! Right face and forward march! We came for a spy, but found one who had fought with us. Good night, monsieur."

I went around to the restaurant next morning. It had been turned wrong side out and a number of children were looking for scraps of food. Whether the old man had been shot or driven away I know not, but his occupation had departed. I saw the commune forming and realized what it meant, and I kept away from the crowds as much as possible and had little to say to any one. As soon as the commune got fairly under way and the national guards went over it they began to press men into the ranks to defend Paris. I had three or four narrow escapes from being pressed and finally took up my lodgings in a vacant house on a side street called Labanc. There were with me a Russian adventurer, a German machinist and a chap who claimed to be a Corsican, and who acknowledged that he was a deserter from the army; strange company, but those were strange times, and we were all moved by the same object—to keep clear of the muss. The German was square and honest and had been living in Paris for seven years previous to the war. We made a common purse and did our own cooking, and it was seldom that any of us left our retreat except under cover of darkness. One afternoon, when the regular government troops had begun to attack the communists and the city was seething and bubbling with excitement, a woman gave our hiding place away to the authorities. We were all asleep in a back room when the front door was broken open and ten men under the orders of a lieutenant came pouncing in upon us.

"And so, my sleepers, you would shirk your duty!" exclaimed the officer as he inspected each one in turn. "Well, we can decide it in a word. Will you fight with us or against us?"

None of us replied. Like me, the others seemed too surprised to answer a plain question.

"I thought so!" grimly observed the officer. "Sergeant, out into the back yard with a file of six men and take this fellow first."

He pointed to the Russian, who suddenly found his tongue and began to argue and protest. He was run out by two men, his wrists tied and his eyes bandaged, and he was still shouting when a volley laid him low. The German was taken next, and the Corsican followed. The thing was put through with appalling celerity, and it had come my turn before I scarcely realized what was being enacted before my eyes. As they laid hands on me to run me out to the wall I gave my name and produced my passes. The men laughed sarcastically, but the officer motioned to them to release me for a moment. When he had read the passes, he asked me a few questions, growing more civil all the time, and at length he returned the papers, with the remark:

"You were a little stupid not to speak up at once, monsieur, though perhaps you could have said nothing in favor of those others. However, better late than never. I shall leave you here, though I cannot promise that some one else will not disturb you later on. Bonjour, Monsieur American."

He was marching off with his men next moment, and as soon as the crowd had dispersed I hunted for safer quarters. The three dead men were left unburied, and as I skulked down the street I had to pass two others hanging from lampposts. Their crime was arguing that God was greater than the commune.

Got the Train Stopped.

Turf, Field and Farm tells this story about the late Charles P. Clark, formerly president of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad: "When the late Robert Bonner purchased Maud S., he sent her to Charter Oak park to be trained. One day a friend of Mr. Bonner left New York to visit him at the park, but found that the train did not stop at that station. The conductor was polite, but said that he could not go against orders. At New Haven a halt was made, and Mr. Bonner's friend tried to bribe the engineer with a $10 bill, but in vain. He was then told that President Clark was on the train, and he went to him.

"'Why don't you see the conductor?' asked Mr. Clark.

"'I have, but he will not disobey orders.'

"'Why not then go forward and bribe the engineer?'

"'I tried bribery at New Haven, but it would not work.'

"The absence of evasion was the best policy. Mr. Clark not only gave orders to have the train stopped at Charter Oak, but promised some day to see Maud S. He had witnessed the little attempt at bribery, and the frank confession of the offense seemed to please him."

Swiss Parliament In the Open Air.

One of the oddest lawmaking bodies in the world is the "landsgemeinde" of the canton of Glarus in Switzerland There are almost as many kinds of parliaments as there are races which elect them. Some are amazingly antiquated in their methods of procedure, while others are as go ahead as it is possible to be. None is so novel as the "landsgemeinde."

The government of no Swiss canton by the people is more absolute than in that of Glarus, where the burghers assemble annually to hold their outdoor parliament in a large square—usually on the first Sunday in May, weather permitting. The honored president occupies a platform in the middle of the square. There are places for boys around this platform, the young idea thus being taught early how to legislate wisely and well for its beloved country.

Altogether the "landsgemeinde" is one of the most quaint and ideal little parliaments in existence.

Meant What He Said.

"Oh, there goes Nell Gaddington with her fiance," said old Mr. Grumpleson.

"Father," exclaimed Gladys, who is a graduate of Smith, "won't you ever give up the habit of butchering our language? You mean feeonsay."

"No, I don't mean feeonsay, nuther! Ain't she goin to marry the blame foot for his money?"—Chicago Herald.

THE STORM FLOWER.

She came with the night and storm.
Loud roared the angry sea.
The north wind shouted a tale of wreck,
But I thought it sang to me.

The wildly whirling snow—
I thought it was summer bloom,
I thought birds sang, that laughing skies
Brightened my narrow room.

I saw a vision fair—
My life as it was to be—
And I craved the happiness, pure and sweet,
That the veiled years held for me.

But my flower of the night and storm
Withered before the dawn,
And black despair and grief and pain
Came with the white veiled morn.

O night and storm and dark!
O wailing wind! O sea!
Why did you bring so sweet a gift
To take it so soon from me?

You hold her in your keep,
For she comes with the storm again.
Nay; it is not the whispering snow
That sings at my window pane.

A SEA CHANGE.

It Was Occasioned by a Small Boy.

He sat on the lower deck, his blackened hands clasped about his drawn up knees and his head dropping upon his bared and grimy breast. Beneath his lowering brows he looked out toward the sea at the purple, white trimmed rollers, at the innocent blue sky, at the far horizon forever unreachable, forever fair, yet changing in beauty by day from a clear lavender line to a gray and misty shore, from mountains of gold and red to the alabaster walls of sea girt palaces.

He frowned at the sea and sky, for the glare of the furnaces was still before his eyes. Though the spicy sea wind blew upon his breast, yet the smell of the blue figure was in his nostrils, and the blasts of hot air still enveloped him. Now he turned his head impatiently and glanced at the upper deck, where the few passengers the steamship carried were sitting, talking and reading at their ease. It was so in life. Some were always floating easily on at the expense of others. He felt a dull rage to think that he should be below looking up at them. It was his own fault. Once he might have made his life a different thing, but now his place was fixed. He could never grow away from it.

He lounged to the rail and looked down at the waves climbing courageously upward, only to fall again, as if to mock life's vain endeavors. How cool and soothing the water would seem to his overheated brain and body! There was a sneer upon his hard lined face as he looked again toward the upper deck. What did any life amount to, theirs as well as his? Yet how they would lament if they thought it all would soon come to an end!

Then his eye was caught by the figure of a small boy with upturned face and hands in his pockets standing beside a man. And suddenly the ship and sea faded from his eyes, and he saw another boy in a big, flapping straw hat and brown overalls, with bare feet, coming down a still, dusty road that wound in dull complacency between blackberry and strawberry vines, apple trees and wild cherry bushes. The boy climbed to the boundary, half fence, half stone wall, of the orchard and felt a sudden twinge in his toe as he pushed his bare feet through the long bush grass and stumbled on a red striped apple. He sat again on the flat stone step without the kitchen door, and his mother came up behind him with a blue and white cracked cupful of sweet milk and dropped a warm doughnut into his upturned hand. "Look out; it's hot!" he could hear her say, and it aroused him with a start. He looked down at the old trousers and filthy shirt. They seemed to contain a more than physical, a moral, contamination. That country boy had come to this. From the peaceful sameness of that quiet life to the ugly monotony of this, earning a mean living by the meanest of labor and spending those earnings for not merely mean, for debasing, objects.

The last time he had been in America he had gone to a sailor's bethel and had thought that after this voyage he would go away into some faraway country place and do better, where fields were green and a living might be wrested from earth, not fire. But at Liverpool good resolves went with the earnings. Evidently this was what he was born for, ten days of misery—he could not get used to the furnaces—a week of what some men called pleasure and then the furnaces again. And so it would go on until— He turned again and looked down on the waves. How easy it would be! There would be one stoker the less, and it would give him distinction for the first—no, the second—time in his life. The first time had been when he left his country home to make his fortune. He had made it well. He sneered again, that bitterest of sneers, at oneself. Then he walked around the wheelhouse at the stern and leaned against the rail at the back and looked down at the water swirling in a widening, roughened path from the beating of the screw. It was pale blue, with filmy ruffles of white and here and there a fold of delicate green. Then as he gazed the wake seemed a live thing, rather many things, and their little lips of foam met and whispered, "Come," and laughed at him as a fool because he hesitated, with his hand on the rail. Not that he was afraid. Oh, no!

"Say?" The man started. He clung to the rail as if to steady himself.

"Say—hello! Anything the matter?"

It was the small boy he had seen on the upper deck a few minutes before.

"No," growled the man, leaning again over the rail.

The boy moved nearer and leaned over beside him. "Water's pretty, isn't it?"

There was no answer. After a moment the boy began again, "Say, isn't it?"

"S'pose so."

Again there was silence. Near the man was fastened to the rail a small dial, with tiny revolving wheel, and from this a twirling string led far out into the water behind.

The boy came around to the other side of the man and near this instrument. "How many miles have they made today? Did fine yesterday, the captain said."

A faint look of interest passed over the man's face. "Most time to take the record now," he muttered.

They both bent over the instrument; their heads were close together; they almost touched each other and the rail. The man forgot other things for a moment.

Then a great foghorn of a voice sounded near. "What are you doing there?"

They straightened up and faced the second mate, a big, powerful man, whose usually good natured face wore a fierce frown of disapproval.

"Get out of that, you. What you roun' here for anyway? Get back there quick. If you touched it, I'll"— He drew nearer to the instrument.

A sardonic smile, unseen by the mate, came to the man's face. As he turned away his hands rested on the railing for an instant. How easy to vault it! What a surprise to the mate, whose words had been comparatively gentle! What a sensation for the passengers! He balanced himself for the plunge, when the boy spoke. The man had forgotten the boy. He was leaning against him now, the curls of his thrown back head touching the man's soiled shirt sleeves, while he expostulated with the mate.

"Now, look a-here. 'Twasn't his fault. I asked him to show me. We never touched it. 'Tisn't hurt a bit, now, is it?"

The mate straightened up from his examination. "Go round there," he ordered the man again, and the sailor slunk away. Then to the boy, "You musn't touch things like this or I shall tell the captain not to let you go over the ship."

"No, I won't. 'Pon my word I won't," cried the boy. Then, turning, he ran after the man, who had dropped upon the deck some distance away and was staring at the sea with a perplexed face.

"He's a nice man," explained the boy, slipping down beside him and nodding his head in the direction of the mate, "only he has got an awful voice. Yelled just like that once, when I got on top of the engine house. He doesn't mean it."

"No," answered the man, still gazing at the sea.

The boy looked slyly up at him once or twice, then drew a piece of rope from his pocket. "Say," he smiled insinuatingly, "one of the sailors told me you could tie more knots than any other fellow aboard. Show me how, won't you?"

The man took the rope and with mechanical fingers began to teach the boy how to make the simplest knots. The mate came by presently and looked at them from beneath his bushy brows, but passed on without speaking.

"My," the boy exclaimed once in honest admiration, "don't you know a lot! I bet you could beat the captain. Where'd you learn 'em all?"

"Oh, I knowed some of 'em when I was a kid," answered the man, and he went on tying more.

It was an absorbing lesson, made so by the boy's eagerness and the man's increasing interest. Suddenly a shrill whistle sounded through the air. The boy looked up. His father beckoned to him from the deck above, and the boy rose to his feet.

"I've got to go," he said, "but I'll be practicing some of 'em, and you can show me the rest next time."

He started to run along the deck, stuffing the rope in his pocket. But he had only gone a few steps when he suddenly turned and came trotting back. He stopped near the man a little uncertainly, pulling vigorously at the frayed end of the rope.

"Say, say, you didn't mind what the mate said, did you? He didn't mean to be cross. They just have to holler that way."

The man did not speak. Again the whistle sounded. The boy turned, but persisted over his shoulder:

"You didn't mind, did you?"

Then the man laughed, a strange, sudden laugh. "No, I didn't mind." And the boy sped away.

Then the change of stokers came, and the man was called below. He went ungrudgingly and promptly. As he passed beneath the upper deck the boy, who was standing there, leaned over and waved, and the man lifted his hand to his hatless head in salute. The memory of the orchard and stone step, of the apples and doughnuts, was still with him, but it was no longer the bitterness of death—rather the sweet savor of life.

The Young Lobster.

From the eggs of the lobster are hatched creatures not in the least resembling their parents—little fellows that swim with featherlike locomotive organs near the surface of the water. At the end of six weeks they develop legs, unless, as is highly probable, they have previously been devoured by fishes or other enemies, becoming thereupon small lobsters of familiar shape. Having reached this stage of growth, the young lobsters become walking animals, and, sinking to the bottom, immediately seek hiding places to protect them from their foes.

Chicago professors manage to get more notoriety than is coming o them. The latest is an English professor, who declares that the pagan element in humanity is what makes the world go round. He furthermore declares that the Sunday School literature and hymns are intolerable in that they do not contain even the possibilities of a dime novel or poetry proper.

The gentlemen is eliminating the moral worth of such publications and thinks of them only as contributions to literature. If they do the good work aimed at why should they not be called worthy?

Can courtesy be overdone? Some frigid critic says it can and is in California. He declares moreover that our visitors are glad to get away from our lavish hospitality and return to the more normal cordiality of their native States.

California's hospitality has been in evidence in the attention paid to the National Convention of Epworth Leaguers and without doubt these visitors appreciated every courtesy paid to them. They did not complain of an over preponderance of attention. But they left San Francisco with the best of impressions and many expressed their desire to make California their permanent home. It is just this genial spirit that is calling attention to us. Fill the cup brim full.

becoming more and more complicated.

The statutes of 1901 have made it necessary for any person having claims against the estate of a deceased person to file such claims with the County Clerk in every instance, which claims must be approved by the administrator or executor, and also by the court, within ten days of the filing thereof, after which it is made the duty of the clerk to notify the claimant of the approval of the claim.

The clerk now gives the notice to creditors. After the completion of the publication of notice to creditors a decree establishing due notice to creditors may be obtained upon the application to the court of any person interested in the estate. An order is made fixing the time and place at which the application may be heard, upon which order the clerk gives notice by posting for at least five days, and the application is then heard in open court like any other court proceeding.

This makes quite a complicated process to follow in order to obtain a decree establishing notice to creditors to take the place of what has heretofore been a very simple process; namely, presenting the printers' affidavit of publication and obtaining the court's order establishing the decree.—Republican.

Birthday Party.

About forty children gathered at the pretty home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. McElroy last Thursday afternoon to celebrate the eleventh birthday of their daughter Edna.

The house and grounds were beautifully decorated and under the beautiful trees a large table was spread where all partook of a dainty lunch. The afternoon was passed in playing games and music.

Miss Edna received a great many handsome gifts from her many friends. After sunset the merry party were driven to their homes, all joyful with glee and wishing Miss Edna many returns of such a happy day.

The following are the names of those present: Misses Edna McElroy, Katie Watt, Edna Cooper, Henrietta Weber, Estella Bill, Helen Fussell, Laura Fussell, Lucia Fochetti, Janet Harris, Doris Dorman, Florence Quartaroli, Gladys Small, Mamie Landy, Amy Engler, Lettie Watt, Mamie Marcy, Bernice Small, Gertie Wall, Mary Kennedy, Alma Bill, Louisa Weber, Ida White, May Wall, Lenora Quartaroli, Lucy McElroy, Hazel Thomas and Agnes Wilson. Masters Henry Weber, Paul Kennedy, Percy Carmer, Frank Engler, Hubert Fowler, Phillip Bill, Dock Engler and Arthur Carmer. Mesdames Kennedy, Richardson, Weber, Bill and McElroy.

Miss Lydia Culberson spent part of last week in San Francisco attending the Epworth League Convention.

Miss Gaebler has returned to her home in the metropolis after a pleasant visit with her cousins, the Misses Wegner.

Mrs. Emily J. Loud, after a pleasant visit of several days with Sonoma friends, has returned to her city home.

Miss Vinnie Morris and her friend Miss Doris Henn made the trip to St. Helena on horseback last Wednesday, where they visited friends.

Sam Lewis has been enjoying the company of his daughter, Miss Mabel Lewis, whom he has not seen for several years. Miss Mabel resides in the East.

A party of young people from the upper part of the valley made up a hay ride last Saturday evening. All agreed that the objective point would be the Garden Party at Sonoma. The ride was a jolly and delightful affair, made more so by singing and comic jokes. Mr. Auerbach of San Francisco contributing much to the merriment. The following participated: Julia Grass, Mamie Conly, Lily Steiger, Mamie Kelly, Lillian Johnson, Rosa Canin, Emma Steiger and Rose Johnson. Messrs. G. Kelly, L. Steiger, A. Arnold, H. Auerbach, G. Steiger, J. Kelly, S. Prior, W. Kelly, F. Steiger and J. Bacigalupi.

Mrs. Mollie French of San Francisco is the guest of her sister Miss Paulina Robin.

Victor Sartori, the Fairyille dairyman, transacted business in this place Wednesday.

Lloyd Craig of San Francisco spent last Saturday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Granice.

Geo. Gies, our popular tonsorial artist, visited San Francisco last Sunday and Monday.

Miss Ruby Eastman is here from San Francisco and is the guest of her sister Mrs. L. Nickerson.

Paul Robin and John Valente were here from San Francisco and spent several days the past week.

Mrs. M. J. Harasthy and little daughter and son, after spending several days with San Francisco friends, returned home Monday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Nick Gallard of Kenwood visited Santa Rosa last Monday. Mr. Gallard is a prominent dairyman of the Los Guilicos Valley.

Mr. Henry Auerbach, the monologue comedian, will entertain the people of this valley at Mervyn Hall, Glen Ellen, this Saturday evening. Mr. Auerbach appeared at the Garden Party in this place.

Chas. L. Carbone of Napa was in town Tuesday. He has just returned from a six-weeks' camping trip on the coast of Sonoma and Mendocino counties, and looks as sleek and fat as a porker in hog-sticking time.

The pink social given to the children of the Congregational Sunday School yesterday afternoon was a delightful affair. The young folks were entertained with all that was pink. There was pink candies, cakes and pink decorations. Many of the children appeared in pink gowns or white gowns trimmed in pink ribbon. In fact this social was the pink of perfection and a decided success.

Up Nuns canyon that day they strayed
And picnicked 'neath the redwood's shade.
Close beside a running brook
Of a pleasant dinner they all partook.

A party of merry picnickers from this place enjoyed an outing in the beautiful Nun's canyon last Sunday. Joe Ryan held the ribbons over the four-horse rig that conveyed the party to and from the picnic grounds, which was composed of the following young people: Mr. and Mrs. Henry Bates, Mr. and Mrs. Claude Burlingame, Mr. and Mrs. Claude Johnson, Mrs. Pauline McMullen, Mrs. H. W. Gottenberg, Misses Brady of San Francisco, Miss Theo Bates, Miss Dora Burris, Miss Bessie Knight, Messrs. Frank Burris, Skelton Glaister, M. Levy, Ed. Burris, Ranald McDonell, Adam Adler and Howard Knight.

Racing at Sacramento.

All of the blue-blooded trotting and pacing horses that are in training for the races this year are congregated at the State Fair grounds in Sacramento in preparation for the meeting of the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders' Association, which will be held on that race course July 30th, 31st and August 1st, 2nd and 3rd. This meeting will open the racing circuit for 1901, and will be followed by a meeting at Santa Rosa and one at Woodland, to be held before the State Fair. From the speed shown by the horses in their work-outs it is expected that a number of green ones will come to the front at this meeting that will be cracker jacks. There are several horses entered in the 2:25 class pacing-purse $1,000, that have been showing quarters better than 30 seconds and miles close on to 2:10, and it is expected that when it comes to a race they will cut the latter figure several seconds, as the Sacramento track will be in prime condition for fast time.

The Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders' Association is one of the oldest and strongest organizations of the kind in the country and numbers among its members the proprietors of all the leading breeding farms in the State and all of the well known horsemen. The Association employs paid officials in the Judges' stand and conducts its races strictly according to rule.

Among the stand bys that will be seen in the sulky are "Farmer" Bunch, who has a better string this year than he ever started out with before; Ed. Lafferty, whose string is not a large one but contains several extra good prospects; Walter Maben, who recently arrived in Sacramento with several fast ones from the citrus belt; Sam Hoy, C. A. Duffee, I. H. Mulholland, Billy Donathan, Al McDonald, Hi and Will Hogoboom, C. A. Spencer, Henry Hellman, and many more who are accustomed to bringing out horses that can beat 2:15.

THE HOME GOLD CURE.

An Ingenious Treatment by Which Drunkards are Being Cured Daily in Spite of Themselves.

No Nauseous Doses. No Weakening of the Nerves. A Pleasant and Positive Cure for the Liquor Habit.

It is now generally known and understood that Drunkenness is a disease and not weakness. A body filled with poison, and nerves completely shattered by periodical or constant use of intoxicating liquors requires an antidote capable of neutralizing and eradicating this poison, and destroying the craving for intoxicants. Sufferers may now cure themselves at home without publicity or loss of time from business by this wonderful "HOME GOLD CURE" which has been perfected after many years of close study and treatment of inebriates. The faithful use according to directions of this wonderful discovery is positively guaranteed to cure the most obstinate case, no matter how hard a drinker. Our records show the marvelous transformation of thousands of Drunkards into sober, industrious and upright men.

"WIVES CURE YOUR HUSBANDS!! CHILDREN CURE YOUR FATHERS!!" This remedy is in no sense a nostrum but is a specific for this disease only, and is so skillfully devised and prepared that it is thoroughly soluble and pleasant to the taste, so that it can be given in a cup of tea or coffee without the knowledge of the person taking it. Thousands of Drunkards have cured themselves with this priceless remedy, and as many more have been cured and made temperate men by having the "CURE" administered by loving friends and relatives without their knowledge in coffee or tea, and believe today that they discontinued drinking of their own free will. DO NOT WAIT. Do not be deluded by apparent and misleading "improvement." Drive out the disease at once and for all time. "The HOME GOLD CURE" is sold at the extremely low price of One Dollar, thus placing within reach of everybody a treatment more effectual than others costing $25 to $50. Full directions accompany each package. Special advice by skilled physicians when requested without extra charge. Sent prepaid to any part of the world on receipt of One Dollar. Address Dept. E 428, EDWIN B. GILES & COMPANY, 2330 and 2332 Market street, Philadelphia.

DEER AND DOVE.

The Season Opens Next Thursday.

The open season for deer and dove commences next Thursday. The latter are scarce in this valley, the birds for the most part having nested and winged their flight to other hunting grounds.

Deer tracks are reported to be numerous in the mountains north and west of town and several parties have been organized for a hunt in the Lovall Valley, on Hood's Mountain and Bennett Peak.

Installation.

District Deputy John T. Stone of Petaluma installed the following officers of Puebla Lodge, No. 168, A. O. U. W., last Tuesday evening:

There will be a social hop at the Bellevue Hotel, El Verano, this (Saturday) evening to which everybody is welcome. Mr. Gonalhardou, the genial proprietor, has made these Saturday evening socials a great success and they always bring out crowds of people from all over the valley.

Capt. J. Johnson, owner of one of the finest orchards in Sonoma Valley, will accept our thanks for a large box of fine peaches. The Captain's place is near Buena Vista station and he is now engaged in drying fruit, having on hand at the present time over one thousand trays of fruit, and he is ready to buy your fruit at a good price.

G. Laloli of the Santa Rosa Resort on the Sonoma road has made many improvements the past year. Located in a beautiful spot on Santa Rosa creek it is an ideal resting place for the tired and thirsty traveler. Mr. Laloli is well-known in Sonoma, where he formerly resided, and always has a kindly welcome for any of his old townspeople who happen to pass that way.

The Campi Restaurant, Santa Rosa, leads all others in that town for the excellence of its meals. M. Albera, the proprietor, is well and favorably known to many residents of this valley. These of course always patronize him when in Santa Rosa, as they know they are bound to get a relishable meal at the Campi. To those who have not yet given this restaurant a trial we take pleasure in recommending its cooking and its delicacies. See adv in another column.

What are Humors?

They are vitiated or morbid fluids coursing the veins and affecting the tissues. They are commonly due to defective digestion but are sometimes inherited.

How do they manifest themselves?

In many forms of cutaneous eruption, salt rheum or eczema, pimples and boils, and in weakness, languor, general debility.

How are they expelled? By

Hood's Sarsaparilla

which also builds up the system that has suffered from them.

It is the best medicine for all humors.

SUICIDE OF JOHN MILLER.

Second Attempt Proved Successful.

John Miller, for many years a resident of this place but who left here for San Francisco eight or ten years ago, committed suicide in that city, Sunday. This was his second attempt to end a life made miserable by despondency bordering on insanity. A little over a year ago when he made his first attempt at self-destruction he was discovered with a rubber tube in his mouth which was connected with a gas burner. He was unconscious and all but dead, but was revived and snatched out of the very jaws of death as it were.

This time he used the same means to end his life. No rescuer was near at hand and he died in his room at No. 15 Spear street, being discovered by his employer after the life spark had fled.

John Miller was fifty years of age. For a number of years he had been following the occupation of a hostler and had to work very hard to earn a precarious living. This is what probably led to his becoming despondent and tired of life.

He was a member of Sonoma Lodge, No. 28, I. O. O. F., of which he was at one time the Noble Grand.

His funeral took place Monday under the auspices of the order he loved so well, the remains being interred in the Odd Fellows Cemetery of San Francisco.

TERRIBLE ACCIDENT.

Mitchel Mullen, the eighteen-year-old son of Mr. M. F. Mullen, the Southern Pacific Station Agent at El Verano, met with a terrible accident at the Union Iron Works, San Francisco, on Friday of last week.

The young man left El Verano about six months ago and entered the Union Iron Works as an apprentice and was making rapid progress in his new calling. On the day of the accident he was operating a circular saw when by some means or another his left hand came in contact with the sharp teeth of the saw, which cut the hand clean off between the wrist and the knuckles. He was taken to a drug store near-by where Dr. Simpson amputated the mutilated hand at the wrist. He stood the operation with remarkable nerve. Young Mullen was then taken to St. Luke's Hospital, where he will be confined for some time. He will return to his home in El Verano as soon as he is able to travel.

Adventure With a Rattlesnake.

Mrs. M. T. Hayes, who resides on her mountain ranch near Agua Caliente heard a great commotion among her poultry on Wednesday night last. She picked up a lantern and went out doors to investigate the cause. A few feet from the house she discovered a large rattlesnake which had just killed a small chicken and was in the act of devouring it. Seizing a pitchfork she impaled the snake on its tines. Then there was the deuce to play. The snake lashed its tail in fury and darted out its fangs in a menacing manner. Mrs. Hayes dare not remove the tines of the pitchfork from the snake's body in order to dispatch it and she was in a quandary. Her sons were absent and could not come to her assistance. She bethought herself of her little granddaughter, whom she called to her aid and while the child held the reptile down with the pitchfork Mrs. Hayes secured a sharp axe and chopped the rattler into a dozen pieces. The end of his tail sported six rattles and a button.

Gus Cornelius Arrives in Dawson.

Gus Cornelius, son of City Treasurer Geo. Cornelius, who left for the Klondyke gold fields last May, writes to his father that after many vexatious delays he arrived in Dawson City on June 18th. He had a rough trip between the White Horse Rapids and Dawson, the steamer making its way very laboriously through ice a foot thick and at one time she ran on the rocks in the Yukon river and came near being wrecked. Immediately upon his arrival in Dawson he went to work as engineer of the night shift in the Anderson mine. Gus says that the bottom of the shaft in the mine is literally covered with placer gold. He likes the country and as long as he can earn good wages he is going to remain. He reports thousands of idle people in Dawson who are unable to get work.

HORSE FELL ON HIM.

Ex-Sergeant Harris Has a Narrow Escape.

Ex-Sergeant C. E. Harris of Battery O, Sixth Artillery, U. S. A., recently mustered out of the army and who has seen rough service in Santiago de Cuba and the Philippines, met with an accident at El Verano last Monday evening that came very near doing what the bullets of the Spaniards and Filipinos failed to do.

The ex-soldier is a guest of Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Young of El Verano. On the evening of the accident he was out horseback riding when suddenly the animal reared and fell backward upon him. The full weight of the horse drove the pommel of the saddle into the prostrate man's abdomen and rendered him unconscious.

Mr. Harris was picked up and carried into the Young cottage, where he lay in an unconscious state for two or three hours. Dr. Thomsen, who is attending the sufferer, reports that he is improving. It was a very narrow escape for Harris and he can congratulate himself that he escaped being killed outright.

Boyes' Hot Springs.

Boyes' Hot Springs, located a few miles northwest of this place are attracting a great deal of attention of late owing to their marvelous curative qualties and are being talked of far and wide. A few years ago these springs, which are also remarkable for their temperature of 114 degrees Fahrenheit, were comparatively unknown. Now they are visited by thousands of health-seekers annually.

BOYES' HOT SPRINGS.

This season the resorts of Sonoma Valley have been crowded with visitors, many of whom have found their way hither to take a course of baths in these noted springs, and although the bathing facilities were more than trebled some months ago they have have been taxed to their utmost capacity to accommodate the rush of bathers.

There is a great future for Boyes' Hot Springs, which are doing as much at the present time to attract attention to this valley as is its matchless climate. Tradition has it that years and years before the advent of the Missionary fathers in the Eighteenth century these identical hot springs were visited annually by the sick and decripit of the numerous Indian tribes of Northern and Central California. They came hundreds of miles to lave in the waters of these health giving springs, and the cures wrought, according to aborigine tradition handed down to the early white settlers, were simply marvelous.

THE GARDEN PARTY.

Largely Attended and a Surprising Success.

Union Hall was transformed into a garden in appearance last Saturday evening, for here the garden party given by the ladies of St. Francis' Church took place. The large stage was beautifully trimmed in oak boughs, trailing vines, ferns and pepperwood. Strings of Japanese lanterns were hung across the stage and bright flowers seemed to grow among the green vines. To the left of the stage was erected a balcony embowered in trailing vines and flowers. Here the scene from "Romeo and Juliet" was enacted, Miss Julie Granice and Mr. Edward Montgomery taking their parts in a very creditable manner. The program was long and entertaining. The singing by the girls of Presentation Convent was well received. The best talent among the League of the Cross Cadets was on hand and the boys took the house by storm. The hit of the evening in the comedy line was the character sketch entitled "Quo Vadis Upside Down." The two young men who took part were clever impersonators and kept the audience in good humor by their jokes and witticism.

Miss Queen Montgomery, well known for her fine voice, appeared in coon songs. She received much applause.

Mr. Henry Auerbach of San Francisco brought down the house with his local jokes. He got in some good ones on Dr. C. C. O'Donnell.

Upon the conclusion of the program the floor was cleared and dancing was commenced and kept up till 12 o'clock.

The people turned out in large numbers and liberally patronized the various refreshment booths.

A neat sum of money was netted by the ladies which goes toward paying off a part of the indebtedness of the church.

BASALT BLOCK INDUSTRY.

It is Picking Up in Sonoma — Blockmakers in Demand.

The basalt block industry is picking up in this place and at the present time there is a demand for blockmakers. S. Schocken, who has one of the largest quarries in this part of the county and who in years past has shipped millions of blocks from this place to San Francisco, has a large number of orders to fill at the present time and is in need of men to turn out the blocks. The fact that he is advertising in another column for fifty more blockmakers is sufficient evidence that the industry is reviving. Fifteen years ago over three hundred men were employed in the several quarries near this place where there are less than twenty-five today.

Death of S. Martinoni.

S. Martinoni of the firm of Ciucci & Martinoni, proprietors of the Toscano Hotel, died at his home in this place last Thursday morning at 9:30 o'clock. The deceased had been incapacitated from attending to business and had been ailing a long time, although he was able to be up and around. Last Wednesday he took to his bed from which he was destined never to arise. The cause of his death was Bright's disease of the kidneys.

Mr. Martinoni located in this place about ten years ago, associating himself in the hotel business with Mr. S. Ciucci. He was a native of Switzerland and aged 53 years.

The funeral will take place to-day (Saturday) from his late residence at 1:30 o'clock. Funeral services will be conducted by Rev. Father Leahy in St. Francis' church, after which the remains will be interred in Mountain Cemetery.

Dr. Rich to Lecture in the California Medical College.

Dr. G. D. Rich has been called upon by the faculty of the California Medical College, San Francisco, to deliver a course of lectures on "The Principles of Medicine." He is to deliver these lectures once a week before the student body. The first of the series will be delivered the first Monday in October. Dr. Rich is a successful practicing physician in this place and since coming here eighteen months ago has made many friends among the people of both town and valley, who will be pleased to learn that his ability is being recognized abroad.

Grass Fire at Kenwood.

A grass fire along side the county road near Kenwood destroyed a quantity of pasturage and fencing on Friday afternoon of last week. The fire was caused by a cigar stump or cigarette thrown alongside the road by a passer-by. Smokers should have a care at this season of the year as a fire started this way has been known to destroy thousands of dollars worth of property. Had the fire mentioned above got beyond the control of the fire fighters great damage would have resulted.

Deafness Cannot be Cured.

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Bismarck's Philosophy

With dutiful trust in God, dig in the spurs and let life, like a wild horse, take you flying over hedge and ditch, resolved to break your neck, and yet fearless, inasmuch as you must some time part from all that is dear to you on earth, though not forever. If grief is near, well, let him come on, but until he arrives do not merely look bright and blessed, but be it, too, and when sorrow comes you bear it with dignity —that is to say, with submission and hope.—Love Letters of Prince Bismarck.

Grandpa's Pet.

A little boy was sitting on his grandfather's knee, talking about various things, when grandpapa pulled out his watch.

"Grandpapa, when you die will you leave that watch for me?" said the boy.

"Well, I don't know—yes, I guess I will," retorted the old gentleman.

"Well, grandpapa, how soon are you going to die?"—Columbus Dispatch.

A Tougher Rail.

"Excuse me," said the citizen of the plains, "but didn't we ride you out of this town on a rail some ten years ago?"

"Believe you did," responded the fearless barnstormer.

"Well, look out this time."

"Oh, I am used to traveling by rail."

"That may be, stranger, but we only have barb wire fences out here now." —Philadelphia Record.

Borax Soap.

To make an excellent soap out of the scraps and broken pieces that come from the soap dishes in bedrooms and kitchens, drop them into an old tin can, and when it is full dissolve three ounces of powdered borax in two quarts of warm water, and stir till the soap is melted. When cold, it will form a jelly. This borax soap is excellent for cleaning and does not fade articles washed in it.

City of the Snows.

For three months in the winter Archangel, the great western port of Russia, scarcely sees the sun and for three months in the summer seldom loses sight of it. Yet there is no city in the whole of Europe which lies for so many months—for the greater part of the year, in fact—under a mantle of snow, and because of this the Russian fondly calls it "The White City."

White, too, is it in other ways. All the chief buildings glare with white paint and blink with white blinds. The churches—and in a Russian city they are not few—are also of pure white; only the cupolas are green and the crosses on their summits gold. And white are the private houses of the better sort, except where Norwegians and Germans live, for buff and blue and red then streak and diaper the pine walls and edge of the gable ends; but street posts, gates, pillars, walls, fences—these are all white.

And in summer for every official you see in a blue or a gray tunic you see ten in white caps and white uniforms. Bright color alone is left to the women and children—pink blouses, green skirts, scarlet petticoats, orange aprons and blue kerchiefs are common enough, while a group of children will always look like a cluster of old English flowers. But otherwise, in summer as in winter, this old city of Archangel is a white city indeed.—Pearson's Magazine.

Behind English Walls.

Not until the visitor to England mounts to the top of a coach does he have any conception of the glories hidden behind those brick battlements which make every Englishman's home veritably a castle. What a revelation of beauty they are! Now it is seen that the reverse side of the vine clad wall forms the most effective of backgrounds for the gay flowers in the hardy border. Hollyhocks stand up like sentinels against the ivy, huge oriental poppies splash their wonderful color among the shrubbery, roses fairly intoxicate the senses where they climb over the half timbered Elizabethan houses and tangle themselves with the clematis in wild profusion over the arches that span the trim garden paths. During a day's ride on top of a coach one will see hundreds of enchanting gardens. During quite a long walk along the same road one would not even suspect their presence because of the universal wall were not an occasional gate left ajar, thereby offering a surreptitious peep.—Everybody's Magazine.

Didn't Match.

"When I came of age," said Mr. Softleigh, "I promised mother that I'd never marry until I found the right girl."

"Indeed!" exclaimed Miss Sharpe.

"Yes, and—er—you're the right girl."

"That's too bad, for you're the wrong man."—Philadelphia Press.

The Best Remedy for Stomach and Bowel Troubles.

"I have been in the drug business for twenty years and have sold most all of the proprietary medicines of any note. Among the entire list I have never found anything to equal Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy for all stomach and bowel troubles," says O. W. Wakefield, of Columbus, Ga. "This remedy cured two severe cases of cholera morbus in my family and I have recommended and sold hundreds of bottles of it to my customers to their entire satisfaction. It affords a quick and sure cure in a pleasant form." For sale by F. Duhring. *

At Bed Time

I take a pleasant herb drink, the next morning I feel bright and my complexion is better. My doctor says it acts gently on the stomach, liver and kidneys, and is a gentle laxative. It is made from herbs, and is prepared as easily as tea. It is called Lane's Medicine. All druggists sell it at 25cts and 50cts. Lane's family medicine moves the bowels each day. If you cannot get it send for a free sample. Address, Orator F. Woodward, Le Roy, N. Y.

A Good Cough Medicine.

Many thousands have been restored to health and happiness by the use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. If afflicted with any throat or lung trouble, give it a trial for it is certain to prove beneficial. Coughs that have resisted all other treatment for for years, have yielded to this remedy and perfect health been restored. Cases that seemed hopeless, that the climate of famous health resorts failed to benefit, have been permanently cured by its use. For sale by F. Duhring. *

During last May an infant child of our neighbor was suffering from cholera infantum. The doctors had given up all hopes of recovery. I took a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy to the house, telling them I felt sure it would do good if used according to directions. In two days time the child had fully recovered. The child is now vigorous and healthy. I have recommended this remedy frequently and have never known it to fail.—Mrs. Curtis Baker, Bookwalter, Ohio. Sold by F. Duhring. *

A Minister's Mistake.

A city minister was recently handed a notice to be read from his pulpit. Accompanying it was a clipping from a news paper bearing upon the matter. The clergyman started to read the extract and found that it began: "Take Kemp's Balsam, the best cough cure." This was hardly what he expected and, after a moment's hesitation, he turned it over, and found on the other side the matte intended for the reading.
